GERMANS RESIST FRENCH EFFORTS TO GOVERN RUHR

REFUSAL TO PRODUCE COAL AND THREAT OF GENERAL RAIL STRIKE FOLLOW SEIZURE OF MINES

(By Associated Press)

French threats to enforce reparations payment by confiscation were made good today by seizure of several state mines in the Ruhr valley.

Mine manager and workers were arrested and in some cases miners announced they would refuse to work if the French entered, it was reported

Oppose Shipments

Official German resistance to the French efforts to ship coal developed in refusal of the eastern district railway administration to dispatch coal trains.

Orders for a strike of all their railway men in the Ruhr were received from Berlin and the strike of the employes was expected before night.

Reichsbank troops in various parts of the Ruhr and Rhineland were seized by the French who claim the French were attempting to remove their funds to unoccupied Germany.

Take Over Customs

France carried out its announced intention of taking over the customs district of the Rhineland when they took possession of the customs and coal tax funds. State forces were also seized.

Report of a possible mediation between the allies and Germany through the League of Nations were discounted in Paris where it is said by French officials that they cannot consent to such a step until the result of the occupation became apparent.

All banking institutions in Dusseldorf closed this afternoon, claiming they cannot do business because of the seizure by France of the local bank of the Reichsbank, thus shutting off the supply of money.

Germans Optimistic

Berlin, Jan. 19—After a week of France's "economic grip" in the Ruhr it seemed here today that M. Coste and General Degoutte have received little more than their trouble for their pains and attempts to force reprisals.

Occupation Nets Little

Few coal barges intercepted here and there and occasional coal trains rerouted were the only signs of the occupation developments in the capital.

It was said more coal was shipped yesterday to places outside of the occupied territory than on Tuesday. It is feared however, that the reluctance of shippers to move coal in the Rhineland in the face of the confiscation of the French, may result in complete shutting off of the domestic supply.

Mark Advances

So far the chief effect of the occupation on the public was the advance taken by the mark which accompanied the raising of the reichsbank's discount rate from ten percent to twelve percent. It is pointed out that the outbreak of the world war served to increase the rate only one percent from five to six percent.

Officials and workmen of the state railroads have been forbidden to cooperate in any way in the efforts of France and Belgium to get coal out of the Ruhr.

French May Face These Troops

Concentration of the German Reichswehr to the number of 25,000 is reported just a few miles ahead of the farthest French advance into the Ruhr region. Germany has warned France of the danger of a possible clash between these two forces.

PLOVER STATION BURNS TO GROUND

LOSS COMPLETELY COVERED BY INSURANCE GREEN BAY ROAD OFFICER SAYS: CAUSE IS UNKNOWN

The entire damage in the fire that destroyed the Green Bay & Western railroad station at Plover Wednesday evening estimated at several thousand dollars, was covered by insurance, officers of the road said today. A temporary station consisting of a box car has already been placed at Plover, and plans for the construction a new permanent station are going forward.

The fire, which was of unknown origin, broke out shortly before 9 o'clock in the evening, and gained considerable headway before it was discovered. A call was sent in to the Stevens Point fire department which declined to make the trip. No effort was made by the villagers to extinguish the flames, which rapidly enveloped the whole building.

Station Agent Everett Russell succeeded in saving $600 worth of freight that was stored in the west end of the building the part last touched by the flames, but was unable to enter the station office where tickets and and records were stored. Several cars of freight which were standing on the tracks in front of the station were moved out of danger by volunteers.

The flames burned themselves out in a comparatively short time and in the morning following the fire nothing remained of the station but the concrete platform covered with smoking ashes.

BATTLE AGAINST DRUGS ENDS IN DEATH FOR REID

POPULAR STAR OF PICTURE WORLD PASSES AWAY YESTERDAY: WIFE AND CHILDREN AT BEDSIDE

(By Associated Press)

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 19—Filmdom mourned today the passing yesterday of Wallace Reid, motion picture star, whose death ended his long battle for life after abandoning the use of habit forming drugs.

His death came as he lay in the arms of his wife, known to the screen world as Dorothy Davenport, and just after he had murmured in delirium: "God—I—please—"

Knew Death Coming

He had been unconscious for many hours, but in his last talk with his wife when his mind was clear, he seemed to be aware, relatives said, that death was upon him.

Wallace Reid

At that time, he said: "Tell them, Mamma, I have won my fight—tell them I have come back."

He had affectionately called his wife "Mamma" since the birth of their son, Billy, five years ago.

Representatives of all phases of film picture work offered sympathy to his wife and little Billy and their tiny daughter the Reid's adopted some time ago. Tributes to the actor were many.

"We have lost one of our greatest stars," said Jesse Lasky.

Stars Pay Tribute

Some of the tributes of the stars were:

"I cannot express the grief and sorrow I feel"—Charlie Chaplin.

"My heartfelt sympathy goes to Mrs. Reid"—Harold Lloyd.

"This one of the saddest things I have ever known"—Theodore Roberts.

"He was a charming boy with a great genius"—Mary Pickford.

"The motion picture industry has sustained an irreparable loss"—Douglas Fairbanks.

Suffered Breakdown

When at the height of his career as a motion picture actor, Reid collapsed several months ago, and after two months' absence from the studio on what was reported to be a nervous breakdown and eye trouble, the family made a sensation announcement just before Christmas that he was a victim of drugs and under treatment in a private sanitarium.

Announcement by his mother-in-law was to the effect that more than a year before while working in studios in New York under a strain of illness he used drugs for a stimulant to hold him up through production of a picture which later gained fame as one of his best. This was revealed later to have set the drug habit upon him and finally last fall he broke down at the Hollywood studios and went under a physician's care.

It was a fight to the finish to conquer the habit his family made known and during the last month he was close to death on several occasions. At Christmas he rallied and indications were that he was on the road to convalescence and only a few days ago his condition was reported showing such signs of improvement that his return to the screen was set for next July.

BADGER LAW MAY HOLD MAGNUSON

TECHNICALITIES LIKELY TO PREVENT RELEASE ON BAIL OF ALLEGED CHAPMAN BOMB SLAYER

Technicalities in the Wisconsin law dealing with the release under bonds of persons charged with murder may compel John Magnuson, town of Auburndale farmer charged with sending the parcel post bomb that cost the life of Mrs. James A. Chapman, to remain in his cell at the county jail until the time of his trial at the next term of the circuit court here.

Neighbors Willing

Bail for Magnuson as set at $5,000 by Judge Byron B. Park, with the provision that there must be two signers to the bond. Under the Wisconsin law only holders of unincumbered real estate to the value of twice the amount of the bail set, can sign bonds for the release of accused murderers. Mrs Magnuson, it is said, has found many neighbors of the accused man's who are willing to go on his bond, but although they have plenty of property to cover the amount of bail set, it is all encumbered to a greater or lesser extent by mortgages and hence is not acceptable. Cash bond to the amount of $5,000 could also be supplied, it is said, but is not acceptable under the Wisconsin law.

Park Here January 29

Judge Park, before whom the hearing for Magnuson's release would come has expressed doubt that there would be any formal request for the alleged bomb-slayer's release before the opening of the adjourned October term of court here January 29, at which time it is expected that bonds for Magnuson's release, if they are to be obtained at all, will be ready for presentation.

Atty. C. E. Briere who is in charge of Magnuson's case, declined to state his plans other than to assert that the application for Magnuson's release would be presented in due time.

Madison, Wis.—Law school graduates at Marquette university would be accorded the same treatment before the bar of the state as graduates of the University of Wisconsin if a bill introduced into the senate by Max Heck, Racine, is passed.

In the past, friends of the Marquette University have made moves to require the University of Wisconsin graduates take the bar examination before being elegible for practice. Each time this has ben suggested, it has been defeated by the legislature.

Suffered Breakdown

When at the height of his career as a motion picture actor, Reid collapsed several months ago, and after two months' absence from the studio on what was reported to be a nervous breakdown and eye trouble, the family made a sensation announcement just before Christmas that he was a victim of drugs and under treatment in a private sanitarium.

Announcement by his mother-in-law was to the effect that more than a year before while working in studios in New York under a strain of illness he used drugs for a stimulant to hold him up through production of a picture which later gained fame as one of his best. This was revealed later to have set the drug habit upon him and finally last fall he broke down at the Hollywood studios and went under a physician's care.

It was a fight to the finish to conquer the habit his family made known and during the last month he was close to death on several occasions. At Christmas he rallied and indications were that he was on the road to convalescence and only a few days ago his condition was reported showing such signs of improvement that his return to the screen was set for next July.

BADGER LAW MAY HOLD MAGNUSON

Technicalities in the Wisconsin law dealing with the release under bonds of persons charged with murder may compel John Magnuson, town of Auburndale farmer charged with sending the parcel post bomb that cost the life of Mrs. James A. Chapman, to remain in his cell at the county jail until the time of his trial at the next term of the circuit court here.

Neighbors Willing

Bail for Magnuson as set at $5,000 by Judge Byron B. Park, with the provision that there must be two signers to the bond. Under the Wisconsin law only holders of unincumbered real estate to the value of twice the amount of the bail set, can sign bonds for the release of accused murderers. Mrs. Magnuson, it is said, has found many neighbors of the accused man's who are willing to go on his bond, but although they have plenty of property to cover the amount of bail set, it is all encumbered to a greater or lesser extent by mortgages and hence is not acceptable. Cash bond to the amount of $5,000 could also be supplied, it is said, but is not acceptable under the Wisconsin law.

Park Here January 29

Judge Park, before whom the hearing for Magnuson's release would come has expressed doubt that there would be any formal request for the alleged bomb-slayer's release before the opening of the adjourned October term of court here January 29, at which time it is expected that bonds for Magnuson's release, if they are to be obtained at all, will be ready for presentation.

Atty. C. E. Briere who is in charge of Magnuson's case, declined to state his plans other than to assert that the application for Magnuson's release would be presented in due time.

Accept Resignation Of Local Pastor Last Night

The resignation of the Rev. N. J. Breed from the pastorship of the First Congregational church was accepted last night at a special meeting of the church membership. Following this action a resolution submitted by Atty. John Roberts expressing the appreciation of the church of the work accomplished by Mr. Breed during his four years in Wisconsin Rapids was unanimously adopted.

The resolution in particular expressed the appreciation of the church of Mr. Breed's activities in clearing up the heavy debt which the church owed when he accepted the pastorship here, and in building up the church membership. His activitie in behalf of the Sunday school were praised.

Mr. Breed's resignation goes into effect Easter Sunday, April 3. No plans have yet been made for securing a new pastor for the church.

WITNESS TELLS OF THREATS TO MURDER DANIELS

FAMILY WAS BLAMED FOR ALLEGED ATTEMPT UPON LIFE OF DR. MCKOIN; HEARD OF KIDNAPING

(By Associated Press)

Bastrop, La., Jan. 19—William J. McDonald, CO, brother-in-law of J. F. Daniels, father of Watt Daniels, who with Thomas Richards was kidnapped near here August 24 and whose mutilated bodies were found in Lake LaFourche last month, testified at the open hearing today into activities of masked men in Morehouse Parish that "Jap" Jones had told him the "whole damn Daniels family" would be "cleaned out" before the alleged attempt to assassinate Dr. B. M. McKoin was settled.

"Clean Out" Family

McDonald said Jones did not know he was related to the Daniels family and that after he became aware of it he asked him to forget it.

"Jones said; 'We are going to clean out the whole damn Daniels family before this thing is settled.' He did not seem to realize that I was related to the Daniels family. I called it to his mind and he told me I needn't get so mad about it, I told him Dr. McKoin was never shot at," McDonald said.

"Did you know anything about the kidnaping?"

Heard of Kidnaping

"Yes sir, I knew it an hour before it happened. You see, I was in Bonita at the time. You can hear all about it except that we didn't know anything about who the parties were who were kidnaped. Well, after the kidnaping Jim Harper and I got to talking in his butcher shop about the kidnaping, and they seemed to think they should have killed him the night they got Daniels, Anderson and Neelis on the Gallion road and they would not have had any more trouble with them. (The Gallion road kidnaping occurred about August 17.)

Would Admit Marquette Graduates To State Bar

Madison, Wis.—Law school graduates at Marquette university would be accorded the same treatment before the bar of the state as graduates of the University of Wisconsin if a bill introduced into the senate by Max Heck, Racine, is passed.

He proposes that Marquette law graduates be admitted to the bar of the state without an examination.

In the past, friends of the Marquette University have made moves to require the University of Wisconsin graduates take the bar examination before being elegible for practice. Each time this has ben suggested, it has been defeated by the legislature.

Demand Public Burning Of Anti-La Follette Letter

Madison, Wis. Jan. 19—Public burning of the "round robin" signed during the war by several hundred University of Wisconsin professors, denouncing the war record of United States Senator Robert M. La Follette is ordered by a resolution introduced into the Senate of the Wisconsin legislature today by Henry A. Huber, administration leader in the upper house.

This resolution, endorsed by Governor Blaine and the LaFollette forces in control of the legislators, directs the librarian of the state historical society to turn over the document containing the signatures of the university professors to the superintendent of public property who is ordered to destroy it.

The one hundred and sixteenth anniversary of the birth of General Robert E. Lee was observed generally throughout the South today.

TOO MUCH DEMOCRACY

Representative Blomberg of Price county in his bill to make the offices of county nurse and county agricultural agent elective is trying to carry the idea of democratic government to a ridiculous extreme. Such a proposition, if adopted and then followed to its logical conclusion in respect to all other offices, would soon remove the last vestiges of efficiency from our government.

Of course the people have the right to choose who they will to serve them, but experience has shown that more satisfactory results are often obtained by delegating this power to administrative heads, boards, or commissions. This is particularly true of such offices as those under consideration. No one has yet gone to the extreme of suggesting that school teachers be elected directly by the people, yet the county nurse and the agricultural agent are both part of the county educational system and are teachers in every sense of the word, although their activities are of course not as a general rule in the class room.

One of the unfortunate things about democratic government is that it is often the case that the more directly responsible a public servant is to the will of the people, the less he thinks of the public welfare and the efficient discharge of his duties, and the more time he devotes to politics, to gaining popular favor in anticipation of the next election. To be of maximum service to the county, the nurse and the agricultural agent should be selected by persons competent to judge their qualifications, and once selected should be free to carry on their work without taking time off every two years or so to carry on a political campaign.

MATTRESSES, STOCKINGS, STOVES

Mattresses are made to sleep on. Stockings are made to put your feet into. Stoves are made to build fires in to keep you warm.

A realization of these simple facts comprises the most elementary lesson in investments. Scores of people in this community insist on using mattresses, stockings and stoves as unreliable banks where their money runs constant risk of loss through theft, fire and forgetfulness.

If you have surplus cash about the house, you are passing up a source of additional income. Money lying about or the man of the house lying about is the same so far as an increase in income is concerned.

The simplest and safest investment you know, is a savings account at some strong bank. And practically every bank nowadays is strong.

When you put your money into a savings account, you loan your money to the bank for an indefinite period. The bank agrees to keep your money safe, agrees to pay it back to you at any time you want it, and agrees to pay you interest on your money at a certain rate.

Something similar to a savings account is a certificate of deposit. If you feel that you will not need your money for some indefinite period such as six months or a year or longer, you can take your money to a bank and secure a certificate of deposit which gets 4 per cent. If you find after taking out your certificate that you need your money, you can have it cashed.

The first lesson to be learned in investments is to keep your money at work so it will be continually bringing in an income. Money begets money only when it is invested in some useful way—not when it lies idle in mattresses, stockings or stoves.

DRYS WILL MAKE COUNTER MOVES TO CHECK WETS

WILL OPEN BATTLE TO STRENGTHEN SEVERSON LAW IF WETS BRING ATTACK ON PRESENT STATUTE

Madison, Wis.—The dry forces of the Wisconsin legislature have counter moves prepared to meet the wet attack on the Severson prohibition enforcement statute, B. N. Hicks, attorney for the Anti-Saloon league announced today. He is of the belief that the senate is favorably disposed to a strict enforcement of the liquor laws.

"When the sun commences to shine on the "moonshine" we will have something of concern to the wet forces," Mr. Hicks said. "It was our plan to permit the Severson law to stand unamended as a satisfactory enforcement statute until the wets commenced to attack it. Now we may have some measure to make its provisions even more rigid."

While Mr. Hicks did not say what amendments the drys will offer it is understood that they are contemplating a section which would prohibit the issuance of any liquor prescriptions. They also are believed to have some measure aimed at soft drinks parlors, and a bill to give the prohibition department a larger appropriation.

The general attack on the Severson law and on prohibition enforcement continues in the legislature. Senator G. F. Czerwinski now has a measure calling for a referendum on the liquor question, beside a memorial to congress asking for return of light wines and beer. Other members are asking complete repeal of the state enforcement statute.

Drys are already aligning their forces to block the wet moves. They will have their counter proposals ready for submission in the legislatures within the next few days, according to the Anti-Saloon league lobbyist.

Introduce Bills To Legislature To Abolish Guard

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 18—Abolition of the Wisconsin National guard is asked in two bills introduced into the senate of the Wisconsin legislature by Senator J. J. Hirsch, Socialist, Milwaukee, and into the assembly by Assemblyman John Polakowski, Socialist, Milwaukee.

These two measures call for complete repeal of the section of the statute creating the state national guard. They would in effect abolish the adjutant general's department and do away with the guard. The state would be dependent upon federal troops should ever an emergency require the use of troops.

Would Save Cost

The socialists, introducing the bill, contend that the national guard has cost Wisconsin $2,617,000 during the past nine years, exclusive of war-time expenditures. They say that during the past year $575,000 was appropriated to the guard in the state while $679,000 was expended in 1920-21, according to their figures.

Point is made of the fact that the Republicans include a plank against militarism in their platform. This the socialists claim makes it incumbent upon them to support a move to cut down expenses for military purposes in the state.

U. S. Owes Protection

They asserted that out of the $50,000,000 annually paid in taxes by the state to the federal government, $40,000,000 goes to the support of the national military organization, and argue that since this is the case, the state should be able to depend upon this organization for police protection, should it be needed.

With a salary of $100,000 a year, Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the Southern Pacific system is said to be the highest paid railway executive in the world.

There are 27,700 fraternal societies in Great Britain and Ireland, with an aggregate membership of nearly 10,000,000.

APPROPRIATION TO EQUALIZE RURAL EDUCATION ASKED

CLAIM ADEQUATE PROVISION FOR COUNTRY CHILDREN CANNOT BE MADE WITHOUT AID FROM STATE

Madison, Wis.—The little country school house in Wisconsin will come into its own if a bill under course of preparation by Rep. A. B. Blomberg, Price county, is adopted by the Wisconsin legislature. An appropriation of at least $5,000,000 annually will be asked by Mr. Blomberg to equalize the chances for each child in the rural districts for an education. Another plan would be the transferring of the proceeds from the state inheritance tax fund to be distributed, by inverse ratio throughout the rural districts of the state.

Sufficient money can not be raised for the education of the children in the rural districts by the rural districts, Mr. Blomberg declared. In the northern part of the state particularly, he said, where the lands, nearly all cut-over, are of little or no value. In addition to providing a better opportunity to educate the country youth the money derived from either an appropriation or the inheritance tax would relieve the rural districts of a serious tax burden now facing them.

Figures compiled by Mr. Blomberg disclose the fact that some districts are taxed as high as 57 per cent of their total taxes for education. The ratio of valuation behind each child in the rural districts, his information shows, varies from $1,000 to $10,000. The funds to be asked for by Mr. Blomberg in his proposed bill would be used to equalize this ratio making even the chances for each child in the rural districts to secure an education. The funds would also permit of the enlargement and expansion of the present facilities for the education of children in rural communities so as to raise the standards of the country schools as close to that of the schools in the city as is possible.

"The problem of educating our youth in the country is a pressing one," the assemblyman asserted. "Under the present system the country boy or girl is not given a fair chance as compared with his city brothers and sisters and it is the hope of myself and the supporters of the proposed bill to alleviate this condition so as to put the children of the rural districts in the state on a footing equal to that of the city children."

Would Revoke Licenses Of Reckless Auto Drivers

Madison, Wis., Jan. 18.—A bill seeking the revocation of the automobile license of any car that has been driven recklessly was introduced today by Rep. A. B. Blomberg, Price county, in the lower house of the Wisconsin legislature.

The bill proposes to add a new section to the statute providing that in addition to any penalty for violation of any provision of the statutes the judge before whom the case is tried may revoke the registration of the motor vehicle operated at the time of the operation. The revocation may not exceed one year and during this period of revocation the motor vehicle shall not be operated on any public highway of the state.

Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, who would abolish pulpits and pews from churches, first came into wide prominence as author of "In His Steps," a book of which the enormous total of 23,000,000 copies have been circulated.

The Vatican library at Rome contains 34,000 manuscripts and about 250,000 printed volumes.

ALICE BRADY AND BUSTER KEATON "BARGAIN NIGHT" STARS

At this season of the year when expenses are high and taxes are to be paid the weekly "Bargain Night" at Gruwell's Ideal Theater when the attenuated pocket book can stand the drain of admissions for the entire family, and the program is "hand picked" with a view to entertaining the entire family, is unusually attractive. This week a strikingly unique Paramount photoplay "The Dawn of the East" with Alice Brady and Kenneth Harlan will be the feature and Buster Keaton the straight faced comedian is also on deck in "The Boat" (pardon the pun) and all this in addition to a most interesting installment of that remarkable chapter play "Buffalo Bill." A two hour show without a dull moment and at the cheapest matinee admission prices.

WILLIAM RUSSELL IN VIRILE WESTERN—IDEAL SATURDAY

The "Big Double Show" at The Ideal Saturday—Matinee and night contains two very popular western stars—Big Bill Russell and Big Bill Desmond—surely a winning hand to draw to. It was expected that Frank Mayo's new feature "The Altar Stairs" would be the feature but the exchange notified the management that this picture was not available so the Fox subject was substituted and the "fans" will without doubt be mighty glad to see William Russell in his splendid outdoor special "Strength of the Pines." The feature will be accompanied by a Century comedy "The Cabby" and a chapter of "Perils of the Yukon" that enthralling serial with William Desmond as the sturdy star. Patrons are especially urged to come to the matinee from 2 until 5 Saturday afternoon. The evening shows are at and 9 and the same old slogan obtains—"Come when you like—we run until 11."

PALACE TONIGHT—GIFT NIGHT

Three fine prizes will be given absolutely free at the Palace Theatre tonight. Come early and get your choice seat. The prizes are all well worth getting as their are no cheap prizes selected. Over fifty different people have been made happy with our "gift" nights. You may be the next happy recipient. We are going to feature a comedy drama tonight. "Free Air" and if you can laugh at the troubles of an autoist and see yourself as others sometimes see you, then you will thoroughly enjoy this fine feature.

Then Buster Keaton will be here with his newest comedy "The Electric House" and you all know how funny he is. Also Aesop's Fable of "The Fortune Hunters" will be shown.

"THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER"

Tomorrow we have the western play, "The Mysterious Rider" another of Zane Gray's famous stories.

Sunday Betty Compson comes to "Your Palace" in one of her very best pictures, according to the reports of many exhibitors. It is a flaming romance of the desert, the story of a "deathless love," a mighty epoc of devotion that defied the ages. Come and see all of this in "Always the Woman" at the Palace Sunday.

Take Bids On New Paving Work Here On February 7

Bids for the new paving contracts for the county highway program for new concrete roads in the county will be taken here on Feb. 8th, it was announced today by Edw. Morris, County Highway Commission, who spoke before the Wisconsin Rapids Rotary Club. It is expected that the pouring of the concrete on the Town of Grand Rapids job on Eighth street south from the city limits would be started early in the spring as soon as the snow was off the ground and the frost out of the ground. The pouring next spring together with the finishing of the pouring just one day before Thanksgiving last fall will establish new records in concrete work in this section of the state, Mr. Morris declared.

Mr. Morris outlined the highway program for the coming year which includes the 11 remaining miles from the 1922 program as well as the new work starting this spring.

DRYS WILL MAKE COUNTER MOVES TO CHECK WETS

WILL OPEN BATTLE TO STRENGTHEN SEVERSON LAW IF WETS BRING ATTACK ON PRESENT STATUTE

Madison, Wis.—The dry forces of the Wisconsin legislature have counter moves prepared to meet the wet attack on the Severson prohibition enforcement statute, B. N. Hicks, attorney for the Anti-Saloon league announced today. He is of the belief that the senate is favorably disposed to a strict enforcement of the liquor laws.

"When the sun commences to shine on the "moonshine" we will have something of concern to the wet forces," Mr. Hicks said. "It was our plan to permit the Severson law to stand unamended as a satisfactory enforcement statute until the wets commenced to attack it. Now we may have some measure to make its provisions even more rigid."

While Mr. Hicks did not say what amendments the drys will offer it is understood that they are contemplating a section which would prohibit the issuance of any liquor prescriptions. They also are believed to have some measure aimed at soft drinks parlors, and a bill to give the prohibition department a larger appropriation.

The general attack on the Severson law and on prohibition enforcement continues in the legislature, Senator G. P. Czerwinski now has a measure calling for a referendum on the liquor question, beside a memorial to congress asking for return of light wines and beer. Other members are asking complete repeal of the state enforcement statute.

Drys are already aligning their forces to block the wet moves. They will have their counter proposals ready for submission in the legislatures within the next few days, according to the Anti-Saloon league lobbyist.

Introduce Bills To Legislature To Abolish Guard

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 18—Abolition of the Wisconsin National guard is asked in two bills introduced into the senate of the Wisconsin legislature by Senator J. J. Hirsch, Socialist, Milwaukee, and into the assembly by Assemblyman John Polakowski, Socialist, Milwaukee.

These two measures call for complete repeal of the section of the statute creating the state national guard. They would in effect abolish the adjutant general's department and do away with the guard. The state would be dependent upon federal troops should ever an emergency require the use of troops.

Would Save Cost

The socialists, introducing the bill, contend that the national guard has cost Wisconsin $2,617,000 during the past nine years, exclusive of war-time expenditures. They say that during the past year $575,000 was appropriated to the guard in the state while $679,000 was expended in 1920-21, according to their figures.

Point is made of the fact that the Republicans include a plank against militarism in their platform. This the socialists claim makes it incumbent upon them to support a move to cut down expenses for military purposes in the state.

U. S. Owes Protection

They asserted that out of the $50,000,000 annually paid in taxes by the state to the federal government, $40,000,000 goes to the support of the national military organization, and argue that since this is the case, the state should be able to depend upon this organization for police protection, should it be needed.

With a salary of $100,000 a year, Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the Southern Pacific system is said to be the highest paid railway executive in the world.

APPROPRIATION TO EQUALIZE RURAL EDUCATION ASKED

CLAIM ADEQUATE PROVISION FOR COUNTRY CHILDREN CANNOT BE MADE WITHOUT AID FROM STATE

Madison, Wis.—The little country school house in Wisconsin will come into its own if a bill under course of preparation by Rep. A. B. Blomberg, Price county, is adopted by the Wisconsin legislature. An appropriation of at least $5,000,000 annually will be asked by Mr. Blomberg to equalize the chances for each child in the rural districts for an education. Another plan would be the transferring of the proceeds from the state inheritance tax fund to be distributed, by inverse ratio throughout the rural districts of the state.

Sufficient money can not be raised for the education of the children in the rural districts by the rural districts, Mr. Blomberg declared. In the northern part of the state particularly, he said, where the lands, nearly all cut-over, are of little or no value. In addition to providing a better opportunity to educate the country youth the money derived from either an appropriation or the inheritance tax would relieve the rural districts of a serious tax burden now facing them.

Figures compiled by Mr. Blomberg disclose the fact that some districts are taxed as high as 57 per cent of their total taxes for education. The ratio of valuation behind each child in the rural districts, his information shows, varies from $1,000 to $10,000. The funds to be asked for by Mr. Blomberg in his proposed bill would be used to equalize this ratio making even the chances for each child in the rural districts to secure an education. The funds would also permit of the enlargement and expansion of the present facilities for the education of children in rural communities so as to raise the standards of the country schools as close to that of the schools in the city as is possible.

"The problem of educating our youth in the country is a pressing one," the assemblyman asserted. "Under the present system the country boy or girl is not given a fair chance as compared with his city brothers and sisters and it is the hope of myself and the supporters of the proposed bill to alleviate this condition so as to put the children of the rural districts in the state on a footing equal to that of the city children."

Would Revoke Licenses Of Reckless Auto Drivers

Madison, Wis., Jan. 18.—A bill seeking the revocation of the automobile license of any car that has been driven recklessly was introduced today by Rep. A. B. Blomberg, Price county, in the lower house of the Wisconsin legislature.

The bill proposes to add a new section to the statute providing that in addition to any penalty for violation of any provision of the statutes the judge before whom the case is tried may revoke the registration of the motor vehicle operated at the time of the operation. The revocation may not exceed one year and during this period of revocation the motor vehicle shall not be operated on any public highway of the state.

THE TRIANGULAR HYPOTHESIS

The man's lose body seemed to have been packed into his clothing as though under a pressure. There was the vague note of victory in his voice.

"Monsieur," he said, "no dead Frenchman has ever been valued to us at less than fifty thousand francs. He may have been a worthless vendor of roast chestnuts before the Madeleine, but if he died in Stamboul, he was straightaway worth fifty thousand francs. You will observe, monsieur, that your government has already fixed the price for murder."

The Prefect of Police looked across the long, empty room at the closed door.

"But was this dead man a citizen of the Turkish Empire? We seem to have a memory of him."

The Oriental smiled.

"Citizens," he said, "are of two classes—your Foreign Office has laid it down—the citizen which is born, and the citizen which is acquired. Each are valued to us at least fifty thousand francs, as your schedule in the indemnities to the Sublime Porte so clearly set it out. Dernburg Pasha was acquired, monsieur. But he is dead! And the indemnity for him, as you have so admirably established it, is not subject to a discount . . . . You came from the Foreign Office, monsieur?"

The Prefect of Police bowed. He put his hand into the pocket of his coat a swift a casual gesture, his fingers closing over an article that lay concealed there.

The Envoy went on:

"I found the Minister Dellaux of an unfailing courtesy; if a subject of our empire has been murdered in Paris, an adequate indemnity would be paid."

The scene at the Foreign Office, when he had been called in before the Minister, came up for an instant to Monsieur Jonquelle. The tall, elegant old man had been profoundly annoyed. This murder came at a vexatious moment, at precisely the moment when the Foreign Office was pressing for the indemnity on the French subjects slain in Stamboul. The very argument had been unfortunate. Stamboul must be made safe, and here was Paris unsafe! Here was Dernburg Pasha dead in the Faubourg St. Germain.

Monsieur Jonquelle had made no reply to the Minister. He had come down to the house in the Faubourg St. Germain of Paris; he had gone over it; he had examined everything; but he had made no comment. Either he had arrived at no conclusion, or else he had a large knowledge of the affair, coupled with some definite plan.

It was an old house, maintaining in its essentials a departed elegance. The floor of the drawing-room was of alternate blocks of white and black marble, laid down like a chessboard. There was a door at one end leading into a small-walled garden. On the other side of the drawing-room, directly opposite, there was another door of precisely the same character leading into a sort of library—the room in which Dernburg had been found in the morning, dead on the floor.

To the Envoy of the Turkish Government in Paris this assassination had the aspect of a diplomatic favor. He had gone at once to the Foreign Office with his demand for an indemnity, and then he had come here into this drawing-room and sat down, before the door until the matter should be settled.

"Monsieur is satisfied?" he said. "He has seen everything?"

"I have not quite seen everything," replied Monsieur Jonquelle, his glance traveling to the slight bulge in the man's tight-fitting waistcoat pocket, "but I am entirely satisfied."

"The evidences are complete, monsieur," said the Envoy, smiling. "Dernburg Pasha lived alone in this house. Late last night a Frenchman called on him. They were in the room yonder together. The windows were open, although the shutters were closed. Persons passing on the street heard the voices distinctly—the voice of a Frenchman, monsieur, and the voice of Dernburg Pasha. Is it not true?"

"Unfortunately, monsieur, we cannot deny it. It is precisely the truth."

"And it cannot be denied that Dernburg Pasha is dead. He was found this morning on the floor of the library yonder, with his throat cut—monsieur has himself observed the indicatory evidences of this assassination . . . The late visitor"—he looked up sharply—"monsieur admits that he was a Frenchman?"

"Ah, yes," replied the Prefect of Police, "the man was a Frenchman."

The Envoy went on with his summary of the evidence.

"The late visitor, a Frenchman; the quarrel; the dead man remaining in the library; the spots of blood on this floor that dripped from the weapon in the assassin's hand as he went out—he escaped from the door yonder into the garden and thence into the street; it is all certain, monsieur?"

"It is all very certain," replied the Prefect. He paused—then:

"But while the events are certain, I am not precisely certain that we have the same conception of them. For example, monsieur, will you tell me how, in your opinion, the assassin escaped from the garden into the street? This garden was not used; the gate leading into the street is nailed up. I should be glad of your opinion on this point."

"With pleasure," replied the Oriental.

"The man escaped from the garden in the simplest fashion. He climbed over the wall, monsieur. The wall is of no great height. It is entirely possible."

Monsieur Jonquelle lifted his eyebrows like one relieved from a perplexity.

"Quite possible," he said. "An assassin could have climbed over the wall without the slightest difficulty. I am obliged for your opinion on this manner of escape, monsieur."

For a moment he seemed to reflect; then he addressed another question to the Envoy.

"Monsieur," he said, "there are blood-drops dripped from the point looked down at the marble extending to the closed door of the library beyond them. "I should be glad to know how you think they came here."

"The explanation is entirely clear," replied the Turkish Envoy. "The assassin went out in haste with the knife in his hand, and these blood-drops dripped from the point of it."

"That would be possible, monsieur," replied Jonquelle. "That might happen!"

The Oriental stooped over a little and glanced along the floor.

"You have observed these blood-drops, monsieur? They are quite clear."

"I have observed them closely," replied the Prefect of Police. "There are seven of these blood-drops. They are about the length of a man's step apart, and they are each clearly visible on a white square of the floor. Your explanation seems admirable, monsieur."

He turned suddenly from a contemplation of these evidences into a vague casuistry.

"Monsieur," he said, "I have thought a great deal about chance evidences of crime. Do you suppose there are any laws of chance?"

The Oriental seemed to reflect.

"The very word 'chance,' monsieur," he said, "precludes the running of any law. Events which result from the operation of law are naturally outside of the definition of the word 'chance.'"

The Prefect of Police did not pause to discuss this comment; he went on, as though the reply were merely an interruption of his discourse.

"Events," he said, "all indicatory evidences in criminal investigation, we divide into two classes; those which happen by design and those which happen by chance. By design we mean by the will and intention of some individual, and by chance we mean all those events which happen outside of such an intention. Would you think, monsieur, that there would be any distinguishing features, by virtue of which one might put indicatory evidences of a crime under one or the other of these heads?"

He continued as though he had entered upon a subject which closely engaged his attention.

"It is an immense and fascinating field for speculation. It seems to be the porsistent belief of every human intelligence that it can, by design, create a sequence of indicatory evidences, which will have all the appearance of a happening by chance. But after long reflection and the study of innumerable instances, I have come to the conclusion that this thing cannot be done. It is my opinion that no human intelligence can grasp the vast ramification of events with a sufficient comprehension to enable it to lay down a sequence of false evidences that will have, at every point, the aspect of a chance happening."

He did not wait for a reply. He seemed to lose all interest in the subject with the closing word of his final sentence. He turned abruptly to another phase of the matter.

"Monsieur," he said, "what, in your opinion, was the motive for this death of Dernburg?"

The Oriental replied at once.

"I do not know that, monsieur," he said. "But does it matter? We are not concerned to establish the motive for this murder. I do not care even to establish the identity of the assassin. We have established that he is French, and that is sufficient for the indemnity. You may determine the motive, if you like."

"I have already determined it," replied Jonquelle.

"And what was it, monsieur, since you have determined it?"

"It was despair!" replied the Prefect of Police. "Do you know what Dernburg Pasha was doing in Paris?"

Another installment of this adventure of M. Jonquelle will appear in our next issue.

American Girls Help Find Missing Greek Refugees

Athens.—The Lost and Found Bureau of the Near East Relief has received 12,000 inquiries for missing persons among Greek refugees during the past month. A large number of them came from relatives in the United States and England.

More than 2,000 missing refugees have been traced by the Relief officials through the system of semi-weekly bulletins issued from the offices at Athens, Sabnika, Mitylene and Chios, and posted in the 500 refugee centers. One of the most interesting sights of Athens is the crowd of several hundred persons who gather daily, from dawn to dark about the American bulletin boards. The Near East officials in Athens have been given the rooms formerly occupied by Dowager Queen Olgo to serve them as headquarters. Two American girls, Myrtle Nolan, of Minneapolis, and Louise Maclachlan, of Detroit, have charge of the Lost and Found Bureau.

Argentinians Seek Dope On Constitutional Changes

Madison, Wis.—Secretary of State Fred Zimmerman has received an unusual request. Vice Governor Pedro Diaz Colodrera, province of Corrientes, Argentina, has written Mr. Zimmerman requesting information on all changes in the Wisconsin constitution that may be proposed at this session of the legislature.

"We Argentinians," writes Governor Colodrera, "who have copied your constitution, have great interest in following more closely the methods which you employ in obtaining the welfare of your people."

The letter also asks for a copy of the new Blue Book and any annual reports bearing upon welfare legislation.

ALICE BRADY AND BUSTER KEATON "BARGAIN NIGHT" STARS

At this season of the year when expenses are high and taxes are to be paid the weekly "Bargain Night" at Gruwell's Ideal Theater when the attenuated pocket book can stand the drain of admissions for the entire family, and the program is "hand picked" with a view to entertaining the entire family, is unusually attractive. This week a strikingly unique Paramount photoplay "The Dawn of the East" with Alice Brady and Kenneth Harlan will be the feature and Buster Keaton the straight faced comedian is also on deck in "The Boat" (pardon the pun) and all this in addition to a most interesting installment of that remarkable chapter play "Buffalo Bill." A two hour show without a dull moment and at the cheapest matinee admission prices.

WILLIAM RUSSELL IN TRIPLE WESTERN—IDEAL SATURDAY

The "Big Double Show" at The Ideal Saturday—Matinee and night contains two very popular western stars—Big Bill Russell and Big Bill Desmond—surely a winning hand to draw to. It was expected that Frank Mayo's new feature "The Altar Stairs" would be the feature but the exchange notified the management that this picture was not available so the Fox subject was substituted and the "fans" will without doubt be mighty glad to see William Russell in his splendid outdoor special "Strength of the Pines." The feature will be accompanied by a Century comedy "The Cabby" and a chapter of "Perils of the Yukon" that enthralling serial with William Desmond as the sturdy star. Patrons are especially urged to come to the matinee from 2 until 5 Saturday afternoon. The evening shows are at and 9 and the same old slogan obtains—"Come when you like—we ran until 11."

PALACE TONIGHT—GIFT NIGHT

Three fine prizes will be given absolutely free at the Palace Theatre tonight. Come early and get your choice seat. The prizes are all well worth getting as their are no cheap prizes selected. Over fifty different people have been made happy with our "gift" nights. You may be the next happy recipient. We are going to feature a comedy drama tonight, "Free Air" and if you can laugh at the troubles of an autoist and see yourself as others sometimes see you, then you will thoroughly enjoy this fine feature.

Then Buster Keaton will be here with his newest comedy "The Electric House" and you all know how funny he is. Also Aesop's Fable of "The Fortune Hunters" will be shown.

"THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER"

Tomorrow we have the western play, "The Mysterious Rider" another of Zane Gray's famous stories.

Sunday Betty Compson comes to "Your Palace" in one of her very best pictures, according to the reports of many exhibitors. It is a flaming romance of the desert, the story of a "deathless love," a mighty epoc of devotion that defied the ages. Come and see all of this in "Always the Woman' 'at the Palace Sunday.

Take Bids On New Paving Work Here On February 7

Bids for the new paving contracts for the county highway program for new concrete roads in the county will be taken here on Feb. 8th, it was announced today by Edw. Morris, County Highway Commission, who spoke before the Wisconsin Rapids Rotary Club. It is expected that the pouring of the concrete on the Town of Grand Rapids job on Eighth street south from the city limits would be started early in the spring as soon as the snow was off the ground and the frost out of the ground. The pouring next spring together with the finishing of the pouring just one day before Thanksgiving last fall will establish new records in concrete work in this section of the state, Mr. Morris declared.

Mr. Morris outlined the highway program for the coming year which includes the 11 remaining miles from the 1922 program as well as the new work starting this spring.

RADIO

BY FRANK CHAPMAN

THERE are two different kind of amplifying circuits used, the one most common being that of audio frequency. Heretofore this has been used a great deal in Europe and the more experienced radio fans in this country are now taking it up. Amplification of the audio frequency takes place where the energy sufficient for the operation of a loud speaker is desired. Radio frequency is used to build up weak signals in order for the detector to function.

If you are near a broadcasting station of high power type the detector alone will give ample signal strength and this strong signal can be built up by radio frequency

There are several more adjustments to radio frequency amplification than there are with audio, and I do not recommend radio frequency for beginners because it is too tedious to manipulate all these circuits and it may discourage you.

The transformer [illegible] the first and second stages of audio frequency is of the laminated iron core type and [illegible] range between 200 and 5,000 [illegible] mentioned previously. Introduce Bill For Marking Of All Cloth Fabrics

Madison Wis.—"Is this all wool?" "Is this all leather?"

These questions of the buying public will be needless in Wisconsin if bills offered on Thursday by Assemblyman Anton Holly be made a county, are enacted into law at this session of the legislature.

His first bill provides that all yarns, knit goods, or any woolen, cotton linen or silk fabric or any blankets rugs, garments, clothing or any made from such yarns or fabric," shall be plainly marked or tagged as to their actual contents." Thus this tag or mark, to be designated in form articles of use or of wearing apparel by the state department of markets, would specify as to "character and amount of virgin wool, shoddy, cotton silk or lines therein number of threads each way to a square inch of such fabric, and the percentage by weight of each dry material therein."

Public Should Know

Assemblyman Holly contends that the buying public is entitled to know just what sort of material or garment they are purchasing. His bill applies alike to manufacturer mail order house, agent, traveling salesman or peddler or retail dealers.

A bill similar to the above was also introduced by Mr. Holly applying to leather goods used for footwear.

Heavy penalities are provided under the terms of the bill for violation of the proposed law. The bill will probably be given a committee hearing next week.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST BAKING POWDER

The Observations of Mike the Meter Man

"The Advantage of meetin' mean people," remarked Mike, the meterman, to Abe Postler, proprietor of the Liberty Pocket Billiard Parlor, "the advantage of meetin' mean people is that they make you appreciate the other kind. A feller that never had a toothache don't know his blessings except theoretically or by reading the pyorrhea ads. And anybody who don't sometimes or frequently have to salve a grouch pretty soon gets to be one himself.

"Th' other day I was sittin' alongside Billy Baxter's desk down to the office. Y' see, in my job, I get around quite a bit lookin' into this an' that. Billy's desk has a nice brass sign on it that says, 'Adjustments,' but that's wrong; it should be, 'Shock Absorber and Oil Gasher' —at least, that's what it should be when Billy's on the job. But this day Billy was out and th' guy they put in his place had ought to of brung his own sign, which if he'd done so would o' read, 'Poison.'"

"I know 'at feller, you bet," was Abe's comment. "Next time I talk to him I blow yer damn power house in smoke up, I get so mad."

"That's him," agreed Mike, the meter man. "Nice, cross-grained little hefrazor he is. I watched him do his stuff for twenty minutes, and he cost the company about sixteen dollars a minute. He certainly wags a mean tongue.

"Well, o' course it wasn't none o' my buesiness—or so I thought at first. If th' company wants to adjust complaint by gettin' th' customers so mad they die o' apoplexy, why, so long's I work for th' company I gotta make out t' stand for it.

"But pretty soon this human rasp file got t' talkin' with one o' my people—nice little lady named White out in th' East End whose meter I bin readin' fer six years, an' always pleasant an' cool an' sweet as a strawberry sundae. Got a kid 'at I seen grow up from th' size o' yer foot to where th' little sonofagun can read meters as good as me.

"Well, this here poi son-voice gets a call from Mrs. White, an' before she c'n much more'n tell what's wrong, he goes to work on her like a cooper around a barrel. 'No—we can't—your kid shouldn't have done that—you're wrong—it's against the rules—read your contract —i can't do a thing for you—you'll have to pay for all damage—make your complaint in writing—i can't help that—baby ought to have known better—now, don't talk that way to me, I ain't paid to stand for no back slack—all right, go ahead and make a complaint to the general manager, and see how far you get.' Them was his conciliatin' words, spoke with the intention o' buildin' up public relations an' selling stock to customers.

"Well, I decided not to kill that bozo just then. Knockin' him fer a row o' post holes wouldn't o' got me no place except off'n the payroll an' into jail. So I gets hold o' my temper with one hand an' my fliv with th' other, an' I beats it out t' Mrs. White's place, it bein' after hours an' my route being covered.

"An' whaduya s'pose was loose? Nothin' at all, that's what. Simply nothin' a-tall. This here kid had gone and started to suck the insulation off'n a toaster cord, an' th' li'l dickens had got his tongue in agin a contact and got hisself jolted. An' then he lets out a yell and falls back an' pulls th' fixture off'n th' wall an' shorted things up so's a fuse blew.

"When I got there Mrs. White was scarte th' color o' her name an' there wa'nt no lights an' th' supper had burned. An' th' kid was still yelling red murder becus him an' her was both scart. Well, all I done was to straighten out them fixture wires an' stick in a fuse plug, an' then everything was jake.

"You'ghta have heard her slobbering blessings an' compliments around when I done it. Say, she grabs me hat and sits me down to th' kitchen table an' forces four pieces o' th' swellest chocolate cake onto me an' a dipper o' home-made wine that would o' pickled horsemeat. Like t'spoiled my appetite for supper, besides tellin' me I was a better electrician than Edison. Made me take her order for a washin' machine th' company's advertising, an' said she'd write the manager an' tell him I'd oughta be superintendent or supin. Say, it was great."

"Who's all that gotta do with this here barbed wire babboon what bawled her out on th' telephone?" asked Abe.

"Why, doncha see? Th' Company sticks that combination a' cayenne an' cyanide on th' job so's people'll appreciate th' rest of us. Some little long-headed scheme, if y' ast me. Folks calls up an' gets a hellava razz off'n this here human porcupine, an' then when th' rest of us goes out to apply th' old salve we get chocolate cake an' orders for washin' machines. Doncha see? If everybody in th' Company was as sweet as karo syrup, th' public'd treat us all like so much union labor, but when we got ourselves a hyena like this here to show 'em what real meanness is, why then they appreciate th' rest of us."

"So that's th' reason for keepin' him on the payroll, er?"

"It's th' only reason I kin see—an' I looked pretty hard to find that one."

THE TRIANGULAR HYPOTHESIS

The man's lose body seemed to have been packed into his clothing as though under a pressure. There was the vague note of victory in his voice.

"Monsieur," he said, "no dead Frenchman has ever been valued to us at less than fifty thousand francs. He may have been a worthless vendor of roast chestnuts before the Madeleine, but if he died in Stamboul, he was straightaway worth fifty thousand francs. You will observe, monsieur, that your government has already fixed the price for murder."

The Prefect of Police looked across the long, empty room at the closed door.

"But was this dead man a citizen of the Turkish Empire? We seem to have a memory of him."

The Oriental smiled.

"Citizens," he said, "are of two classes—your Foreign Office has laid it down—the citizen which is born, and the citizen which is acquired. Each are valued to us at least fifty thousand francs, as your schedule in the indemnities to the Sublime Porte so clearly set it out. Dernburg Pasha was acquired, monsieur. But he is dead! And the indemnity for him, as you have so admirably established it, is not subject to a discount . . . . You came from the Foreign Office, monsieur?"

The Prefect of Police bowed. He put his hand into the pocket of his coat a swift a casual gesture, his fingers closing over an article that lay concealed there.

The Envoy went on:

"I found the Minister Dellaux of an unfailing courtesy; if a subject of our empire has been murdered in Paris, an adequate indemnity would be paid."

The scene at the Foreign Office, when he had been called in before the Minister, came up for an instant to Monsieur Jonquelle. The tall, elegant old man had been profoundly annoyed. This murder came at a vexatious moment, at precisely the moment when the Foreign Office was pressing for the indemnity on the French subjects slain in Stamboul. The very argument had been unfortunate. Stamboul must be made safe, and here was Paris unsafe! Here was Dernburg Pasha dead in the Faubourg St. Germain.

Monsieur Jonquelle had made no reply to the Minister. He had come down to the house in the Faubourg St. Germain of Paris; he had gone over it; he had examined everything; but he had made no comment. Either he had arrived at no conclusion, or else he had a large knowledge of the affair, coupled with some definite plan.

It was an old house, maintaining in its essentials a departed elegance. The floor of the drawing-room was of alternate blocks of white and black marble, laid down like a chessboard. There was a door at one end leading into a small-walled garden. On the other side of the drawing-room, directly opposite, there was another door of precisely the same character leading into a sort of library—the room in which Dernburg had been found in the morning, dead on the floor.

To the Envoy of the Turkish Government in Paris, this assassination had the aspect of a diplomatic flavor. He had gone at once to the Foreign Office with his demand for an indemnity, and then he had come here into this drawing-room and sat down before the door until the matter should be settled.

"Monsieur is satisfied?" he said. "He has seen everything?"

"I have not quite seen everything," replied Monsieur Jonquelle, his glance traveling to the slight bulge in the man's tight-fitting waistcoat pocket. "but I am entirely satisfied."

"The evidences are complete, monsieur," said the Envoy, smiling. "Dernburg Pasha lived alone in this house. Late last night a Frenchman called on him. They were in the room yonder together. The windows were open, although the shutters were closed. Persons passing on the street heard the voices distinctly—the voice of a Frenchman, monsieur, and the voice of Dernburg Pasha. Is it not true?"

"Unfortunately, monsieur, we cannot deny it. It is precisely the truth."

"And it cannot be denied that Dernburg Pasha is dead. He was found this morning on the floor of the library yonder, with his throat cut—monsieur has himself observed the indicatory evidences of this assassination . . . The late visitor"—he looked up sharply—"monsieur admits that he was a Frenchman?"

"Ah, yes," replied the Prefect of Police, "the man was a Frenchman."

The Envoy went on with his summary of the evidence.

"The late visitor, a Frenchman; the quarrel; the dead man remaining in the library; the spots of blood on this floor that dripped from the weapon in the assassin's hand as he went out—he escaped from the door yonder into the garden and thence into the street: it is all certain, monsieur?"

"It is all very certain," replied the Prefect. He paused—then:

"But while the events are certain, I am not precisely certain that we have the same conception of them. For example, monsieur, will you tell me how, in your opinion, the assassin escaped from the garden into the street? This garden was not used; the gate leading into the street is nailed up. I should be glad of your opinion on this point."

"With pleasure," replied the Oriental.

"The man escaped from the garden in the simplest fashion. He climbed over the wall, monsieur. The wall is of no great height. It is entirely possible."

Monsieur Jonquelle lifted his eyebrows like one relieved from a perplexity.

"Quite possible," he said. "An assassin could have climbed over the wall without the slightest difficulty. I am obliged for your opinion on this manner of escape, monsieur."

For a moment he seemed to reflect; then he addressed another question to the Envoy.

"Monsieur," he said, "there are blood-drops dripped from the point looked down at the marble extending to the closed door of the library beyond them. "I should be glad to know how you think they came here."

"The explanation is entirely clear," replied the Turkish Envoy. "The assassin went out in haste with the knife in his hand, and these blood-drops dripped from the point of it."

"That would be possible, monsieur," replied Jonquelle, "That might happen!"

The Oriental stooped over a little and glanced along the floor.

"You have observed these blood-drops, monsieur? They are quite clear."

"I have observed them closely," replied the Prefect of Police. "There are seven of these blood-drops. They are about the length of a man's step apart, and they are each clearly visible on a white square of the floor. Your explanation seems admirable, monsieur."

He turned suddenly from a contemplation of these evidences into a vague casuistry.

"Monsieur," he said, "I have thought a great deal about chance evidences of crime. Do you suppose there are any laws of chance?"

The Oriental seemed to reflect.

"The very word 'chance,' monsieur," he said, "precludes the running of any law. Events which result from the operation of law are naturally outside of the definition of the word 'chance.'"

The Prefect of Police did not pause to discuss this comment; he went on, as though the reply were merely an interruption of his discourse.

"Events," he said, "all indicatory evidences in criminal investigation, we divide into two classes; those which happen by design and those which happen by chance. By design we mean by the will and intention of some individual, and by chance we mean all those events which happen outside of such an intention. Would you think, monsieur, that there would be any distinguishing features, by virtue of which one might put indicatory evidences of a crime under one or the other of these heads?"

He continued as though he had entered upon a subject which closely engaged his attention.

"It is an immense and fascinating field for speculation. It seems to be the persistent belief of every human intelligence that it can, by design, create a sequence of indicatory evidences, which will have all the appearance of a happening by chance. But after long reflection and the study of innumerable instances, I have come to the conclusion that this thing cannot be done. It is my opinion that no human intelligence can grasp the vast ramification of events with a sufficient comprehension to enable it to lay down a sequence of false evidences that will have, at every point, the aspect of a chance happening."

He did not wait for a reply. He seemed to lose all interest in the subject with the closing word of his final sentence. He turned abruptly to another phase of the matter.

"Monsieur," he said, "what, in your opinion, was the motive for this death of Dernburg?"

The Oriental replied at once.

"I do not know that, monsieur," he said. "But does it matter? We are not concerned to establish the motive for this murder. I do not care even to establish the identity of the assassin. We have established that he is French, and that is sufficient for the indemnity. You may determine the motive, if you like."

"I have already determined it," replied Jonquelle.

"And what was it, monsieur, since you have determined it?"

"It was despair!" replied the Prefect of Police. "Do you know what Dernburg Pasha was doing in Paris?"

Another installment of this adventure of M. Jonquelle will appear in our next issue.

American Girls Help Find Missing Greek Refugees

Athens.—The Lost and Found Bureau of the Near East Relief has received 12,000 inquiries for missing persons among Greek refugees during the past month. A large number of them came from relatives in the United States and England.

More than 2,000 missing refugees have been traced by the Relief officials through the system of semi-weekly bulletins issued from the offices at Athens, Sabnika, Mitylene and Chios, and posted in the 500 refugee centers.

One of the most interesting sights of Athens is the crowd of several hundred persons who gather daily, from dawn to dark about the American bulletin boards. The Near East officials in Athens have been given the rooms formerly occupied by Dowager Queen Olgo to serve them as headquarters. Two American girls, Myrtle Nolan, of Minneapolis, and Louise Maclachlan, of Detroit, have charge of the Lost and Found Bureau.

Argentinians Seek Dope On Constitutional Changes

Madison, Wis.—Secretary of State Fred Zimmerman has received an unusual request. Vice Governor Pedro Diaz Colodrera, province of Corrientes, Argentina, has written Mr. Zimmerman requesting information on all changes in the Wisconsin constitution that may be proposed at this session of the legislature.

"We Argentinians," writes Governor Colodrera, "who have copied your constitution, have great interest in following more closely the methods which you employ in obtaining the welfare of your people."

The letter also asks for a copy of the new Blue Book and any annual reports bearing upon welfare legislation.

Indian Aces Defeat Tri-Cities, 25 to 19

Visiting Red Skins Hand Local Third Defeat of Season in Rough Contest Last Night.

The Indian Aces proved fully as good as advance reports heralded them and handed the Tri-Cities their third defeat of the season on the local floor last night, 25 to 19, in a game that was both fast and rough in spots.

The Rapids outfit, minus Bill Smith, was not up to par, but the red skins (two of 'em were red) had a passing attack that would have been hard to stop under any circumstances. The pale face recruits signed up by the Indians since they appeared here last season didn't weaken the team any, and the absence of Leroy, star forward, was not missed at all with Elliott and Brookhart furnishing all the trouble looker for in that department.

Plenty of Indian

Despite the preponderance of white men in the visitors' lineup, local fans who wondered whence the name "Indian" when they saw them take the floor were given explanation enough before the game was over. Steffes at center was plenty heap big Injun for the whole aggregation, and it was his work in all departments more than any other factor that gave the Aces the victory. He contributed three baskets and seven free-throws, outjumped Plahmer consistently at center, and was the life of the visitors' passing game.

The contest started getting a little boisterous before the end of the first half and in the second period there was plenty of rough stuff mixed up with the basketball. Plahmer for the Tri-Cities and White for the Aces both exceeded the legal limit on personal fouls by two or three, but in view of the fact that there were no substitutes available an agreement was reached by which neither of them was evicted. Referee Joe Swetland had a job on his hands and acquitted himself in good style. Eleven personal fouls were called on each team.

Lead First Half

The Tri-Cities travelled at a fast pace during the first period and completed the first twenty minutes with a two point lead. Contributing to this, however, were shots from mid-floor by Ritchay and Plahmer, as well as two more free-throws than were counted by the enemy. In the second half, with the fates less favorably disposed on the Rapids long distance tries, the visitors climbed into the lead and at one time boasted a ten point advantage. The Tri-Cities staged a gallant rally in the closing minutes, but time was too short to escape defeat.

The Indians made a hit with the fans in that even after they had acquired a considerable lead they kept on playing the game, refusing to resort to stalling tactics. They travelled fast on the floor and passed accurately and Hill and Gaulke deserve lots of credit for the way in which they broke up practically all of the plays that came down the floor. Guarding on both sides in fact was excellent, and practically all of the scores registered were on long shots.

Murphies Triumph

In a burlesque preliminary contest the Murphies walked all over a pick up agregation, gathered together at short notice to oppose them when Perr Edwards was unable to appear. The first half started out like a basketball game, and after a few minutes the Murphies were on the short end of a 6 to 0 score. That ended the opposition's scoring, however, and the local amateur champs led 8 to 6 at half time and 35 to 6 at the end of the game. Le Roux and Plenke did some pretty basket shooting for the Murphies.

Ladies Are Coming

Sunday afternoon the Tri-Cities meet the Milwaukee Bright Stars, "the only ladies' traveling basket ball team in the United States playing men, regular men's rules." Captain Steffes of the Aces said that he had seen the ladies in action, and that they were capable of showing some real opposition to any male aggregation in the state. They have been touring the state, and have already met many of the strongest teams in the southern section.

STATE MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION LAW AID TO SETTLERS

LAND OWNERS NOW COMING TO REALIZE THAT ADEQUATE FINANCING IS ESSENTIAL TO LAND DEVELOPMENT

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 19—That just booming and boosting land is not real land development was the statement today of G. M. Householder, Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, in addressing the Tri-State Development Congress. Mr. Householder emphasized the importance of the Wisconsin land mortgage association as a real means by which the land settlers can be properly financed.

Boosting Not Enough

"Land owners," said Mr. Householder, "are beginning to realize that simply booming, boosting, advertising and placing settlers on land itself does not mean development.

"Until recently would-be developers in the cut over country have held to the idea that once a man was sold a piece of land he could in some way develop it. This plan worked with varying results when land was very low in price and there was little else to attract the would-be settler to other fields.

Settler Needs Help

"But in this day, wild land is pretty much of a liability to the settler until sizeable clearings are made and an income from it established. But the clearing, the modest buildings, and the family's living cost money and the settler is generally a man of modest means. The banks can be of little service to a newcomer holding on land contract while the professional loaning agencies are looking for gilt edge securities. These agencies find that the newly arrived settler's equity is too low, his turn over too slow and that they lack organization to supervise clearing and building loans which are widely scattered.

Means Are Available

"The Wisconsin Land Mortgage Association law offers a means of financing settlers by providing 20 and 30 year amortization loans repayable at a earlier date. The selling company supervises the settler's clearing and other improvements over and above the actual labor cost. These settlers mortgages are then grouped and bonds issued against them. These bonds are purchased by small investors who would not for many years save enough to make purchase of a full farm mortgage possible.

"This simply means that Wisconsin has provided for the principal of the city building and loan associations to be taken out into the developing country and used by honest, sincere, home loving men who are willing to work and anxious to establish homes of their own.

RADIO

BY FRANK CHAPMAN

THERE are two different kind of amplifying circuits used, the one most common being that of audio frequency. Radio frequency has been used a great deal in Europe and the more experienced radio fans in this country are now taking it up. Amplification of the audio frequency type is used where the energy sufficient for the operation of a loud speaker is desired. Radio frequency is used to build up weak signals in order for the detector to function.

If you are near a broadcasting station of high power type the detector alone will give ample signal strength and this strong signal can be built up by audio frequency amplification so as to be heard by an audience.

There are limits to radio frequency amplification once the signal from a radio station has been built up to a certain point. Increasing the number of stages of amplification of radio frequency, does not as a rule, increase the signals. It is this feature that makes this kind of amplification desirable, for it will increase the strength of weak out of town stations, while not increasing the strength of nearer stations, in the same proportion. This permits you to copy the weaker signal, or rather the one that was weaker.

Radio frequency should be used where you cannot put up a big aerial outside, as with two steps of audio frequency and a good aerial you will be able to pick up signals over a radius of several hundred miles and that ought to be sufficient for anyone with the large number of stations broadcasting today. When radio frequency is used with an indoor or loop aerial, it amplifies the incoming radio wave, before they reach the detector and the weak signal picked up by the aerial are built up into strong ones and easily rectified by the detector. Then by the use of audio frequency amplifiers these signals are again built up to operate a loud talker.

Up until recently, the drawback with our radio frequency amplifying transformers was, they were restricted to a narrow band of wave lengths. Now, however, one of the big commercial companies have put out a transformer that will work efficiently on all wave lengths from 200 to 550,000 and another type that is efficient from 5,000 to 25,000 meters. These two will cover all the wave lengths used today in this as well as foreign countries.

There is no other circuit that will give the advanced fan such a clear insight into the working of the vacuum tube as the radio frequency amplification circuits. This is especially true if he builds an experimental set. It is best to set this set up on a table and not mount it in a cabinet in order that you can experiment with it until the different circuits and operation of them are fully understood. In tuning this set and adjusting the potentiometers controlling the grid he will soon find out the true action taking place within the audion. He will discover the importance of the grid condenser and leaking of the vacuum tube. There are several more adjustments to radio frequency amplification than there are with audio frequency and I do not recommend radio frequency for beginners because it is too tedious to manipulate all these circuits and it may discourage you.

The drawing shows two steps of radio frequency, detector and two steps of audio frequency amplification, with a regenerative tuner. A tuning coil and variable condenser are connected in series with the aerial and ground. An energy absorbing circuit is thus formed which feeds into the first radio frequency amplifying tube. The second tube also acts as a radio frequency amplifier and its transformers of the tuned variety, made by shunting a variable condenser across, what would ordinarily be the antenna and ground connections of a vario coupler or loose coupler, or the primary and the usual coupler, secondary circuit for the tuned secondary. Two potentiometers are used in this circuit, one to supply the correct plate potential for the detector tube and the other as a stabilizer for the radio frequency amplifier tube. The transformer between the first and second stages of radio frequency is of the laminated iron core type with a wave length range between 200 and 5,000 meters mentioned previously. When audio frequency is not desired, you connect the telephones between the variometer in the plate circuit and the negative side of the "A" battery.

Pointers

Your spreads should be guyed so they will not toss about when it is windy.

If lightning should strike your aerial and it is not properly grounded, it will ground itself through the primary of your receiving set and damage the windings.

Signals come in fine some nights but do not on others. These are the things you cannot control.

Remember to cut out diagrams as they appear in this paper, they may come in handy later on.

Introduce Bill For Marking Of All Cloth Fabrics

Madison Wis.—"Is this all wool?" "Is this all leather?"

These questions of the buying public will be needless in Wisconsin if bills offered on Thursday by Assemblyman Anton Holly Kewaunee county, are enacted into law at this session of the legislature.

His first bill provides that all yarns, knit goods, or any woolen, cotton linen or silk fabric or any blankets rugs, garments, clothing or any made from such yarns or fabric," shall be plainly marked or tagged as to their actual contents. Thus this tag or mark, to be designated in form articles of use or of wearing apparel by the state department of markets, would specify as to "character and amount of virgin wool, shoddy, cotton silk or lines therein number of threads each way to a square inch of such fabric, and the percentage by weight of each dry material therein."

Public Should Know

Assemblyman Holly contends that the buying public is entitled to know just what sort of material or garment they are purchasing. His bill applies alike to manufacturer, mail order house, agent, traveling salesman or peddler, or retail dealers.

A bill similar to the above was also introduced by Mr. Holly applying to leather goods used for footwear.

Heavy penalities are provided under the terms of the bill for violation of the proposed law. The bill will probably be given a committee hearing next week.

The Observations of Mike the Meter Man

"The Advantage of meetin' mean people," remarked Mike, the meterman, to Abe Postler, proprietor of the Liberty Pocket Billiard Parlor, "the advantage of meetin' mean people is that they make you appreciate the other kind. A feller that never had a toothache don't know his blessings except theoretically or by reading the pyorrhea ads. And anybody who don't sometimes or frequently have to salve a grouch pretty soon gets to be one himself.

"Th' other day I was sittin' alongside Billy Baxter's desk down to the office. Y' see, in my job, I get around quite a bit lookin' into this an' that. Billy's desk has a nice brass sign on it that says, 'Adjustments,' but that's wrong: it should be, 'Shock Absorber and Oil Gusher' —at least, that's what it should be when Billy's on the job. But this day Billy was out and th' guy they put in his place had ought to of brung his own sign, which if he'd done so would o' read, 'Poison,'

"I know 'at feller, you bet," was Abe's comment. "Next time I talk to him I blow yer damn power house in smoke up, I get so mad."

"That's him," agreed Mike, the meter man. "Nice, cross-grained little helrazor he is. I watched him do his stuff for twenty minutes, and he cost the company about sixteen dollars a minute. He certainly wags a mean tongue.

"Well, o' course it wasn't none o' my buesiness—or so I thought at first. If th' company wants to adjust complaint by gettin' th' customers so mad they die o' apoplexy, why, so long's I work for th' company I getta make out t' stand for it.

"But pretty soon this human rasp file got t' talkin' with one o' my people—nice little lady named White out in th' East End whose meter I bin readin' fer six years, an' always pleasant an' cool an' sweet as a strawberry sundae. Got a kid 'at I seen grow up from th' size o' yer foot to where th' little sonofagun can read meters as good as me.

"Well, this here poinson-voice gets a call from Mrs. White, an' before she c'n much more'n tell what's wrong, he goes to work on her like a cooper around a barrel. 'No—we can't—your kid shouldn't have done that—you're wrong—it's against the rules—read your contract —I can't do a thing for you—you'll have to pay for all damage—make your complaint in writing—I can't help that—baby ought to have known better—now, don't talk that way to me, I ain't paid to stand for no back slack—all right, go ahead and make a complaint to the general manager, and see how far you get.' Them was his conciliatin' words, spoke with the intention o' buildin' up public relations an' selling stock to customers.

"Well, I decided not to kill that bozo just then. Knockin' him for a row o' post holes wouldn't o' got me no place except off'n the payroll an' into jail. So I gets hold o' my temper with one hand an' my fliv with th' other, an' I beats it out t' Mrs. White's place, it bein' after hours an' my route being covered.

"An' whadaya s'pose was loose? Nothin' at all, that's what. Simply nothin' a-tall. This here kid had gone and started to suck the insulation off'n a toaster cord, an' th' li'l dickens had got his tongue in agin a contact and got hisself jolted. An' then he lets out a yell and falls back an' pulls th' fixture off'n th' wall an' shorted things up so's a fuse blew.

"When I got there Mrs. White was scarte th' color o' her name an' there wa'nt no lights an' th' supper had burned. An' th' kid was still yelling red murder heens him an' her was both scart. Well, all I done was to straighten out them fixture wires an' stick in a fuse plug, an' then everything was jake.

"Y'oughta have heard her slobbering blessings an' compliments around when I done it. Say, she grabs me hat and sits me down to th' kitchen table an' forces four pieces o' th' swellest chocolate cake onto me, an' a dipper o' home-made wine that would o' pickled horsemeat. Like U'spoiled my appetite for supper, besides tellin' me I was a better electrician than Edison. Made me take her order for a washin' machine th' company's advertising, an' said she'd write the manager an' tell him I'd oughta be superintendent or supin. Say, it was great."

"Wha's all that gotta do with this here barbed wire babboon what bawled her out on th' telephone?" asked Abe.

"Why, doncha see? Th' Company sticks that combination a' cayenne an' cyanide on th' job so's people'll appreciate th' rest of us. Some little long-headed scheme, if y' ast me. Folks calls up an' gets a heluva razz off'n this here human porcupine, an' then when th' rest of us goes out to apply th' old salve we get chocolate cake an' orders for washin' machines. Doncha see? If everybody in th' Company was as sweet as karo syrup, th' public'd treat us all like so much union labor, but when we got ourselves a hyena like this here to show 'em what real meanness is, why then they appreciate th' rest of us."

"So that's th' reason for keepin' him on the payroll, er?"

"It's th' only reason I kin see—an' I looked pretty hard to find that one."

CHIEF ENGINEER GAINS BIG POLICY

Declares Tanlac Built Him Up 21 Pounds and He Passed Examination In Fine Shape

"Before taking Tanlac I was in no condition to apply for life insurance, but, I have built myself up twenty-four pounds with this medicine and have just recently taken out a ten thousand dollar policy, and the physician who examined me says there's no mistaking my fine physical condition now. The report showed my health a hundred percent perfect and it made me feel good all over."

The above statement was made, a few days ago, by John Doepke, 1114 State St., Milwaukee, Wis., chief engineer at the Hotel Wisconsin, one of Milwaukee's largest and most up-to-date hostelries, in Milwaukee.

"For a year or more," said Mr. Doepke, "I had suffered from indigestion, indigestion and acute constipation. I would get up mornings tired and feel tired all day long. I was troubled with headaches, felt tired and began to get afraid I had some disease of my old time energy and strength. But since taking Tanlac I simply feel proud to say to my friends I feel what I eat, sleep fine at night, and don't know what it is to feel tired any more. There's nothing too good I can say for Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Adv.

Indian Aces Defeat Tri-Cities, 25 to 19

Visiting Red Skins Hand Local Third Defeat of Season in Rough Contest Last Night.

The Indian Aces proved fully as good as advance reports heralded them and handed the Tri-Cities their third defeat of the season on the local floor last night, 25 to 19, in a game that was both fast and rough in spots.

The Rapids outfit, minus Bill Smith, was not up to par, but the red skins (two of 'em were red) had a passing attack that would have been hard to stop under any circumstances. The pale face recruits signed up by the Indians since they appeared here last season didn't weaken the team any, and the absence of Leroy, star forward, was not missed at all with Elliott and Brookhart furnishing all the trouble looked for in that department.

Plenty of Indian

Despite the preponderance of white men in the visitors' lineup, local fans who wondered whence the name "Indian" when they saw them take the floor were given explanation enough before the game was over. Steffes at center was plenty heap big Injun for the whole aggregation, and it was his work in all departments more than any other factor that gave the Aces the victory. He contributed three baskets and seven free-throws, outjumped Plahmer consistently at center, and was the life of the visitors' passing game.

The contest started getting a little boisterous before the end of the first half ,and in the second period there was plenty of rough stuff mixed up with the basketball. Plahmer for the Tri-Cities and White for the Aces both exceeded the legal limit on personal fouls by two or three, but in view of the fact that there were no substitutes available an agreement was reached by which neither of them was evicted. Referee Joe Swetland had a job on his hands and acquitted himself in good style. Eleven personal fouls were called on each team.

Lead First Half

The Tri-Cities travelled at a fast pace during the first period, and completed the first twenty minutes with a two point lead. Contributing to this, however, were shots from mid-floor by Ritchay and Plahmer, as well as two more free-throws than were counted by the enemy. In the second half, with the fates less favorably disposed on the Rapids long distance tries, the visitors climbed into the lead and at one time boasted a ten point advantage. The Tri-Cities staged a gallant rally in the closing minutes, but time was too short to escape defeat.

The Indians made a hit with the fans in that even after they had acquired a considerable lead they kept on playing the game, refusing to resort to stalling tactics. They travelled fast on the floor and passed accurately and Hill and Gaulke deserve lots of credit for the way in which they broke up practically all of the plays that came down the floor. Guarding on both sides in fact was excellent, and practically all of the scores registered were on long shots.

Murphies Triumph

In a burlesque preliminary contest the Murphies walked all over a pick up agregation, gathered together at short notice to oppose them when Bert Edwards was unable to appear. The first half started out like a basketball game, and after a few minutes the Murphies were on the short end of a 6 to 0 score. That ended the opposition's scoring, however, and the local amateur champs led 8 to 6 at half time and 35 to 6 at the end of the game. Le Roux and Plenke did some pretty basket shooting for the Murphies.

Ladies Are Coming

Sunday afternoon the Tri-Cities meet the Milwaukee Bright Stars, "the only ladies' traveling basket ball team in the United States playing men, regular men's rules." Captain Steffes of the Aces said that he had seen the ladies in action, and that they were capable of showing some real opposition to any male aggregation in the state. They have been touring the state, and have already met many of the strongest teams in the southern section.

STATE MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION LAW AID TO SETTLERS

LAND OWNERS NOW COMING TO REALIZE THAT ADEQUATE FINANCING IS ESSENTIAL TO LAND DEVELOPMENT

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 19—That just booming and boosting land is not real land development was the statement today of G. M. Householder, Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, in addressing the Tri-State Development Congress. Mr. Householder emphasized the importance of the Wisconsin land mortgage association as a real means by which the land settlers can be properly financed.

Boosting Not Enough

"Land owners," said Mr. Householder, "are beginning to realize that simply booming, boosting, advertising and placing settlers on land itself does not mean development.

"Until recently would-be developers in the cut over country have held to the idea that once a man was sold a piece of land he could in some way develop it. This plan worked with varying results when land was very low in price and there was little else to attract the would-be settler to other fields.

Settler Needs Help

"But in this day, wild land is pretty much of a liability to the settler until sizeable clearings are made and an income from it established. But the clearing, the modest buildings, and the family's living cost money and the settler is generally a man of modest means. The banks can be of little service to a newcomer holding on land contract while the professional loaning agencies are looking for gilt edge securities. These agencies find that the newly arrived settler's equity is too low, his turn over too slow and that they lack organization to supervise clearing and building loans which are widely scattered.

Means Are Available

"The Wisconsin Land Mortgage Association law offers a means of financing settlers by providing 20 and 30 year amortization loans repayable at a earlier date. The selling company supervises the settler's clearing and other improvements over and above the actual labor cost. These settlers mortgages are then grouped and bonds issued against them. These bonds are purchased by small investors who would not for many years save enough to make purchase of a full farm mortgage possible.

"This simply means that Wisconsin has provided for the principal of the city building and loan associations to be taken out into the developing country and used by honest, sincere, home loving men who are willing to work and anxious to establish homes of their own.

Simmons Mattresses

for the Relaxation and Sleep You Need

We feature Simmons Mattresses because they conform exactly to our ideals of purity, sanitation, comfort and satisfaction. They are made of pure, clean, new Kapok or Cotton only. Old, "renovated" materials are never tolerated. They are pure, sweet and sanitary through and through—just such mattresses as you want to sleep upon—yet their cost is no greater than you would be obliged to pay for inferior grades that nobody can conscientiously vouch for. Come in and let us show you all the different styles and qualities.
